Product Description

Affordable and Versatile
An affordable work light designed to put light where you need it most. The KnuckleheadLED alkaline model 5660 LED flashlight is perfect for any type of job. All of which makes for a safer and more productive environment.

- Perfect for hands-free working situations.
- Avoid the juggling act during automotive, utility, electrical, hobby, fishing, camping and other maintenance work with the help of the Knucklehead's magnet and storable hook.
- Fully adjustable knucklehead. Rotates right and left a full 360 degrees and articulates up and down, front to back a full 200 degrees. Puts light where you need it most.
- Super bright dual focused LED beam head. Side panel offers 14 bright white LED's with a full widely dispersed light.
- Big power button. Easy to power on and off, even with gloves on.
- Uses four AAA alkaline batteries for long life.

Flexibility
The Knucklehead's namesake rotating and articulating head provides unparalleled coverage when it comes to spotlighting your work area. Between the 360 degrees of rotation and 210 degrees of articulation, the light can stand on its own or lie on its side and be positioned in a variety of ways for maximum light. The engineered optics feature dual dynamic reflectors within larger focused reflectors.

A very affordable and versatile work light for any situation that needs light where you need it, when you need it. Job done!

Why didn't they think of this earlier?
By Tony on July 24, 2014

I do a lot of car restoration and my garage is pretty dim, so I need a really good spot light when I am working deep in the engine compartment or inside the car. After becoming tired of holding flashlights in my mouth (and drooling over everything) while I worked, I thought I would try this knucklehead flashlight and found I really like it.
Here's why:

1. The magnet is very strong and is located in the base of the light instead of attached externally to the body like other units I saw. I don't like the looks of the look of the external magnet attached to the body of the light. I have tried those before and don't like them.
- When I got the light, after first using it, I stuck on the side of my tool box with the magnet such that the body of the light is hanging perpendicular to the side of the tool box. It hasn't moved. Recently I was working under the dash removing and installing an air box (old VW) with a modified one. I was able to stick this light in a weird place on the firewall (carpet removed), aim the light to where I needed it to, and didn't have to worry about it after that.
2. The knuckle portion of the beam is nice in that I can focus the beam in a 360 swiveling arc up and down. The light can be moved to any point in a 360 degree hemisphere. Again, being able to plant the light on a metal surface then swivel the beam to hold in place at one point has been exactly what I have been needing a light to do. The knuckle is also easy to re-adjust the beam focus when I need it.

3. Although it could be a little brighter, the luminance was no different from the smaller type lights I would use holding in my mouth while I worked. The beam was adequate for my needs.

4. The body is strong, dense and durable. Read more ,

This work light can really be adapted to many different needs. I especially like the magnetic base that allows me to position the light where I need it, or hang it for easy access. The LED panel light creates a nice flood light that I've been using in some of my photography projects to light up those "hard to get corners". I can think of several people who this will make a great gift for, and I'm planning to pick up a couple of extras for myself as well.

I'm seeing spots because this is so bright :)

I think flashlights are best represented by a video and not words so I went ahead and made a short video of me using this flashlight.

The light output (lumens) is horribly dim. There is no way that is 220 lumens as advertised. I have a DeWalt DCL040 Worklight that is easily three times brighter. It is advertised as 110 lumens.

better value than streamlight
By Trevor Kilby on August 3, 2014

This is a very handy light at a great price. I've been drooling over the streamlight version of this light, but after playing with one, couldn't justify the super high price. So when I found the Knucklehead LED light for less than half the price, I jumped on it.

Overall it is a very sturdy light. The plastic housing may not be as "high impact" as the streamlight, but mine has survived several 3 to 4 foot falls onto concrete with no damage other than the expected scuff marks.

The lights work well and throw good illumination where you need it. I have yet to use the hook attachment, but I use the magnet almost daily to help position the light where I need it.

I bought this as I saw good reviews.
By John on January 15, 2015

I bought this as I saw good reviews....but they must be mistaken. The product I received was made with very cheap plastic that might break if you dropped it even once. Also, my streamlight stylus pro pen matched the lumen output of this flashlight. I really doubt it throws 220 lumens as my stylus pen light does 70 lumens max and seems just as bright. The magnet attached at the base is very weak and allows the flashlight to occasionally slip downward or off the surface completely if touched slightly. I guess you do get what you pay for.

Love This! Lightweight and Versatile
By A. Bogardus on July 25, 2014

This is a great flashlight. It's very lightweight and has two light sources, both are very bright. I really like the way the top rotates to literally any position and being able to hang it up, hold it in your hand, or attach it to a metal surface with the (very strong) magnet makes it very flexible. It's very well-constructed and feels comfortable in my hand when I hold it. Very happy with it.
